Professor Bruce E. Cain

Democracy More or Less:
America's Political Reform Quandary

Professor Cain discusses his new book that explores why American political reform efforts so often fail to solve the problems they intend to fix.

Bruce Cain is a Professor of Political Science at Stanford University and Director of the Bill Lane Center for the American West. Now a UC Berkeley Professor Emeritus, he was the Heller Professor of Political Science where he taught from 1989-2012. While at Berkeley he also served as Director of the Institute of Governmental Studies and as Executive Director of the UC Washington Center, a program that serves students from all UC campuses. He was Co-Director of the Center on Civility & Democratic Engagement, founded by the Class of '68, from its inception until 2013 and now serves on the Advisory Board.

Hosted by Bruce Roberts ('68) and Hopkins & Carley
